

Title: Selections

Speaker: Marc G. Genton

Department of Statistics

Texas A&M University

Abstract

We start by describing several situations that involve various forms of selection mechanisms and naturally lead to statistical analysis based on asymmetric distributions. We propose a unified view on the construction of selection-based multivariate distributions and discuss inferential issues in this setting. We present a selection of illustrative examples and provide links with some of Chris' recent work.